24 November 2020

Session II – 3:30 pm CET

Re-imagining the Role of Student Placements in a Peri-Covid Environment

Workshop Organizers

Julie E McAdam, Director of Internationalisation, School of Education, University of Glasgow

Francisco Valdera-Gil, School of Education Mobility Officer, University of Glasgow.

Description

This workshop brings together a team of educators working across undergraduate and postgraduate degrees in the School of Education to discuss the ways in which student placements have adapted to meet the constraints of physical distancing. The workshop will revisit the purpose and aims of placements and share examples of how these have been re-imagined in order to continue connecting students to local and global communities.

After a short introductory welcome the workshop will present three different approaches, allowing time for questions and discussion. This will be followed by an open discussion (with possible use of breakouts) on the ways in which sustainable placements that allow for equitable intercultural experiences can be achieved.

Colleagues who have an interest in creating potential collaborations that use online learning (COIL) are welcome to join the workshop.
